Learning Mobility for Mutual Be

LEMONOC Matrix of guiding criteria for learning mobility with non-industrialised countries

The LEMONOC Matrix of guiding criteria has been established after having carried out a research on North-to-South Learning mobility involving Northern participants, Northern HEIs and host partner(s) in the Global South within the context of a Lifelong Learning Programme Erasmus Multilateral Project

The criteria aim at supporting stakeholders in organizing qualitative learning mobility with non-industrialised countries in higher education. They are not intended to pass judgment on mobility programmes

The criteria have been designed in order to build a foundation to the future LEMONOC tools (manual and scan). These tools will aim at encouraging and supporting good practice for implementing learning mobility programmes between Northern HEIs and Southern partners.

The criteria are arranged around a framework which features five time-related stages of programme implementation (from the planning to the return phase) and three cross-cutting areas: partnership process, participant learning process and organisational process.

The criteria apply to various types of North to South Learning mobility involving a Northern HEI. However, due to the variety of mobility programmes and contexts, some criteria might be more relevant than others to future tool users.

'Partnership Process' refers to what both partners (senders and receivers) are doing in relation to developing and strengthening their own relationship.

This matrix has been designed essentially from the sending institution's perspective. However, while most of the criteria directly apply to the Sending HEIs, the matrix also includes criteria that apply to both Sender and Receiver and some that apply to the Receiver only. We have done this as we believe that both Sender and Receiver have a responsibility in ensuring and enhancing programmes' quality.

This Matrix and the set of criteria is meant to be regularly updated in the future taking into account the feedback from the LEMONOC tools users and any changes and trends in the international learning mobility sector.
